Benvinguts! Welcome to the seventeenth conference of the European Association for Urban History (EAUH), which is scheduled to take place in Barcelona, the capital of Catalonia, from Wednesday September 2 to Saturday September 5, 2026. The organising institutions hope it will be as successful as the latest ones.

The conferece's central theme is 'City Networks in Europe and Beyond'. City networks have played a strategically important role in both the past and the present. Cities and the connections between them have been just as influential—if not more so—than states in shaping Europe and extending its influence beyond the continent, especially through colonial relationships. Although the history of Europe is often identified with states and nations, it is largely the history of its networked cities.

This is clearly evident in Barcelona, a major medieval center in the Mediterranean, which also led the great leap forward of the industrial age, with crucial links to other cities, from Mediterranean and Atlantic Europe to the Hispanic colonies. And with a dense urbanistic, socioeconomic, political and cultural trajectory as a node in Contemporary European history.

Since the 18th century, Barcelona has maintained a long historiographical tradition of studies about the city, considered as a substantial historical subject in itself. In this tradition, the municipal archive and the city museum have played a prominent role, along with historical research in universities and institutions dedicated to urban studies.

With its focus on cities and the networked urban world, the Seventeenth EAUH Conference also aims to foster cross-disciplinary approaches between history, geography, urbanism, architecture, heritage, museum studies and other human and environmental sciences, all of which are critical sources of knowledge for the preservation of contemporary democratic culture.

There are three types of sessions, as is usual at EAUH conferences: main sessions, specialist sessions and roundtables, with an initial total of 100 accepted sessions for the EAUH Barcelona Conference 2026. Regardless of their type, all sessions will be organised together in approximately twenty clusters defined to foster the interests, contacts and choices of the attendees.

The conference will start on Wednesday in the afternoon with two slots for sessions, before the opening ceremony with keynotes and a reception. On Thursday there will be some visits after the working sessions, and the conference dinner for all will be on Friday evening. Saturday's programme is an important part of the Conference, with workshops, specialised visits and urban trekkings directly linked to the sessions, and with the participation of local associations for history, heritage and urban planning.

Several universities, research institutes, cultural institutions and local study centers have been working together to make the Conference programme possible. In Barcelona, urban history matters.

THE LIST OF PAPERS REFLECTS THE SITUATION AS OF 11 AUGUST 2026; SOME AUTHORS MAY NOT PRESENT THEM AT THE CONFERENCE

SESSION 1
The Cities that made the Empire: Connectivity and Urban Networks from Late Republican to Imperial Times
This session explores the role of urban networks in consolidating Roman hegemony from the Late Republic to the 2nd century AD. It assesses how Rome integrated, altered, or dismantled the various types of ties between city networks to strengthen control, highlighting the mechanisms that shaped urban connectivity within and beyond the Empire.

Coordinators: Noelia Cases Mora, Borja Martín Chacón, Sabine Panzram

Session 1 - Slot I
Wednesday 2 September 2026 13:45-15:15 Room 1 - Facultat d'Història, Universitat de Barcelona

SESSION 2
Transportation Networks and Urban Organisation in the Roman Empire: Analysing the backbones of Rome
The Roman Empire was a vast pancontinental territory configured around network of cities. However, the creation, subsistence, and evolution of these population centres depended on a complex transportation network. This session will be focused on this transportation infrastructure and how it affected urban development in the Roman world.

Coordinators: Pau De Soto, Clara Filet, Adam Pažout

Session 2 - Slot I
Thursday 3 September 2026 08:30-10:45 Room 1 Institut d'Estudis Catalans

SESSION 51
Local urban community networks and peripheral modernisation in the modern times (ca. 1850-1939)
Towns and cities were populated by people gathered in smaller-scale groupings such as local communities, bound by pre-existing estate bonds, religious creed, professional ties, elite networks or ethnicity. We would like to focus on the inner-city networks of communities as crucial social forces that played its autonomous role in modernisation of European peripheries.

Coordinators: Aleksander Łupienko, Michał Wiśniewski, Kamil Śmiechowski, Rafał Matyja

Session 51 - Slot I
Thursday 3 September 2026 14:00-15:30 Room 219 - Facultat d'Història, Universitat de Barcelona

SESSION 56
Infrastruggles and citizenship: Urban public services, 1840-1940
In the second half of the nineteenth-century, many urban public services were instituted. This meant a change in the nature of urban politics. Those who benefited from the new public services demanded a say in their organisation. Others were denied access to the city, and 'infrastruggles' became the battle ground to claim citizenship.

Coordinators: André Klaassen, Magnus Linnarsson, Greet De Block

SESSION 61
Geopolitics and the spread of Art Nouveau in Europe
Art Nouveau was the first architectural movement to appear in Europe with a clear cosmopolitan ethos in the newly industrialising and bourgeois cities away from the great capitals. However, this process was linked to the construction of national identities when the European map underwent profound changes. This session explores this contradiction in the urban sphere, describing the geopolitics of Art Nouveau.

Coordinators: Ramon Graus, Mireia Freixa

Session 61 - Slot I

SESSION 96
Heritage conflicts and urban identity [Round Table]
Heritage has a great potential regarding the construction of a shared identity, above all in an international perspective. Nevertheless, it also constitutes a sort of battlefield for controversies generated by the clash of narratives, in social, technical and cultural sense. Massive tourism, globalisation, wars and architectural debate can set a difficult scenario for the stakeholders. The proposed round table aims to gather relevant representants of the up-to-date expertise in the field in order to nurture an interdisciplinary discussion.

CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS AND VISITS: WEDNESDAY 2, THURSDAY 3 AND, ABOVE ALL, SATURDAY 5

The Conference Workshops and Visits Programme is fully integrated into the EAUH Conference Barcelona 2026 and is directly linked to the sessions and their organisers. It offers many opportunities in the form of a diversity of workshops, with specialized, methodological and other types of visits to the metropolis of Barcelona and its research institutions and cultural spaces.

The Programme has 41 options in the confluence of urban history with the fields of archives and archaeological sources, historical geography and city morphology, architecture and art history, planning and public space, urban social movements, and heritage and museology. It has been developed by several university centres, professional associations and civic organisations, with the Barcelona History Museum playing a prominent role and with the support of Barcelona UNESCO-UIA World Capital of Architecture 2026. Some visits will be shared with people from local archives, heritage and history studies associations in Barcelona (translation will be provided in these cases.

It is possible to attend several workshops and visits throughout the Conference. Activities with less than 5 registrants before the Conference will be canceled and the upper limit is 20 attendees per group.

The workshops and visits proposals are scheduled on Wednesday 2 in the morning, Thursday 3 in the evening and, above all, Saturday 5 mostly from 09:00 to 13:00, with a few more until 16:30.

ABOUT THE EAUH

The European Association for Urban History (EAUH) was established in 1989 with support from the European Union. Its goal is to provide a multidisciplinary forum for historians, geographers, sociologists, anthropologists, art and architectural historians, planners and other scholars working on various aspects of urban history from the middle ages until the present.

Every two years, the EAUH organises a large-scale international conference, at which European and non-European scholars discuss new directions in the field, conduct and stimulate comparative research, and initiate future collaborative projects and publications.

Membership of the EAUH is free of charge, and is confirmed by repeated active participation during the conferences. The EAUH supports the participation of young scholars by bursaries, which cover registration fees. Since 2010 the EAUH has been able to offer mobility bursaries in a limited number of justified cases.

Since 1992 the EAUH has organised sixteen international conferences. The first conference took place in Amsterdam.
